Fund's Manager comment EDM Spanish Equity

In August, a month characterised by lower trading volumes, the net return of the Ibex 35 index was +1.99%, driven by its main components: the banking sector, Iberdrola, Telefónica and Cellnex. As in other periods, EDM Spanish Equity's low weighting in these few securities has penalised its relative performance compared to the index. EDM Spanish Equity (class L) fell -0.14% in August, since it was also affected by the poor monthly performance of the automotive industry, Grifols, CocaCola Europacific Partners and Laboratorios Rovi.

Rovi's shares reflected very positively its improved estimate for sales growth in 2021 (from 20%-30% to 35%-40%), as announced in the July earnings presentation. The share price reached an all-time high on 23 August, with a cumulative return of +15% for the month and +80% for the year. However, three days later Japan announced that it was recalling a batch of Moderna's COVID-19 vaccine manufactured by Rovi when it detected suspended metallic particles, along with its two adjacent batches. And four days later they announced the death of two patients who received doses of one of the recalled batches (from the adjacent batches) and the recall of two other batches upon visual detection of suspended rubber particles. The negative impact of this news on the share price was more than 20%. Nevertheless, the cumulative positive return in 2021 is +39%. On 1 September Moderna and Takeda (the distributor in Japan) issued a joint statement with the results of the investigation carried out. In conclusion, the metallic particles were only in a few vials of one batch and have no negative health impact. Furthermore, the two deaths recorded were a coincidence. In addition, the Japanese Ministry of Health confirmed that the suspended rubber particles detected were due to mishandling in the syringe loading process. Therefore, the risk for Rovi is very limited and in the coming sessions it should recover much of last week's correction. We have maintained our position in the Fund.

Having passed the halfway point of the year, EDM Spanish Equity's portfolio is trading at very attractive multiples, with a 2022 P/E ratio of 13.3x for an expected earnings growth of 14% over the next 5 years.
